

REPETITION

The importance it has for infants to learn!

Repetition is NOT boring but is actually essential

It is beneficial to development in early childhood

For little ones it is doing the same thing over and over
It is actually comforting and familiar

It makes them more willing and eager to explore and engage.

Why children like repetition?

Simply and importantly, to a child, repetition is not just the same thing twice

Each time they experience something the knowledge becomes more secure which allows them to feel more self-confident.

The benefits of repetition!

They are actually learning more each time.

This is good for development and comprehension

The feeling of mystery brings them comfort and improves their self-confidence

Play, Learn, Repeat
